† Dabigatran is the first oral direct thrombin inhibitor to be approved by FDA. Unlike injectable thrombin inhibitors, it is approved to lower the stroke risk for patients with atrial fibrillation. For patients without an artificial heart valve, dabigatran represents an alternative to warfarin that does not require laboratory INR monitoring. Dabigatran is dosed twice a day. It is metabolized by glucuronidation to four active metabolites and the dose must be lowered for patients with reduced renal function. P-glycoprotein inhibitors should generally be avoided in patients receiving dabigatran. The most serious adverse effects associated with dabigatran during pre-market clinical trials were bleeding, dyspepsia, gastritis-like symptoms, and hypersensitivity. Compared to warfarin, patients older than 75 appear to be at greater risk for clinically significant bleeding from dabigatran.
